Physical noncommercial space is so profoundly rare in New York City. Ridgewood Commons is dedicated to being open to all - a place you don't have to buy a $8 coffee to sit for a few hours to read or talk with your friends.

We're here at this party to announce Ridgewood Commons - introduce the projects currently housed here and have a nice time with each other. But we're also here because we very seriously need to fundraise.

It would be great if money didn't come into the picture at all. But the reality is that this space is big and while we have a good deal on the space, the rent is still considerable. $6k every month - well below market rate especially these days in Ridgewood, but no small sum. And as a new formation, we have a pretty small financial runway.

If you can toss us some money tonight through cash, Venmo, whatever you've got, we are truly grateful. And we know that funds are tight and the job market sucks. But what we really ask is if you can make a recurring donation of whatever size works for you. Having regular recurring expenses coming in gives us financial stability and a real fighting chance at a long future in Ridgewood.

If you care about this project, you are not an observer or a consumer. You're part of it. If you want RC to be reliably around the corner from your home, robust and powerful, make a recurring donation through Withfriends or Patreon.
