

The square white tables are strong, but their size and proportion are not ideal for many space activities, the work needed to tuck them away for events is significant - it stresses the tables and presents opportunity for injury.

There exist commercial solutions that offer improvements: a better shape for group conversation, and design intended for setup/breakdown cycles.

Flip-top "seminar" tables

"Seminar table" is a common term, some brands use their own branded terms like "Flip-N-Fold" or "Flip and Nest."

$260, could replace top with wood, and maybe adjust top size and placement so it's more symmetrical, though that might be limited by the leg design, intended for a strong cantilever to one side.

There are few variations offered on the same site. Some of these might be nearly identical, some differ in terms of mechanism or construction.

Speed Up Configurations

Intelligent products can significantly reduce the costs associated with conference rooms by increasing their rate of use.

Users need facilities to be flexible; they need to be able to set up different configurations quickly and easily and to handle speedy changeovers between training sessions, group meetings or conferencing.

FlipTop Twin has been specifically conceived for this purpose and offers a multiplicity of uses and simple mechanisms.
